Weekly Price Watch: 10 February 2023

Directorate: Statistics & Economic Analysis

Sub-directorate: Economic Analysis

Domestic grain prices came under pressure for two consecutive weeks, with the exception of wheat prices, which increased by 1.2% for two weeks in a row. Local white and yellow maize prices decreased by 1.4% respectively this week compared to the previous week, whilst soybean and sunflower seed prices decreased by 0.1% and 4.0% respectively week-on-week. Domestic maize prices came under pressure due to stable to lower US maize prices. On the international front, US yellow maize, wheat and soybean prices decreased by 0.8%, 0.2% and 0.4% respectively this week compared to the previous week. Increased crushing of sunflower seed in Russia and the EU has recently contributed to rising supplies and weaker global prices of sunflower oil and meal.

Latest News Developments

In his State of the Nation Address, President Cyril Ramaphosa said a national state of disaster had been declared to respond to the electricity crisis. The president said that to deal with the crisis, he was appointing a minister of electricity. Treasury is expected to announce tax incentives for solar power, and will make adjustments to the "bounce back" loan scheme to allow businesses to apply for solar financing. The president said the state of disaster, which began with immediate effect, would help with measures to support businesses in the food production, storage and retail supply chain, including for the rollout of generators, solar panels and uninterrupted power supply. Critical infrastructure such as hospitals and water treatment plants would be exempt from load shedding. The president said that to deal with the crisis, he will be appointing a Minister of electricity in the presidency to assume full responsibility for overseeing all aspects of the electricity crisis response. The Minister will focus full-time and work with the Eskom board and management on ending load shedding and ensuring that the energy action plan is implemented without delay. He later clarified that Minister would day and night just be focusing on the electricity crisis. The Minister of public enterprises will, however, still remain the shareholder representative of Eskom. Ramaphosa said that, as per his energy plan announced last year, government was going to proceed with the rollout of rooftop solar panels. In his budget speech, the Minister of finance will outline how households will be assisted, and how businesses will be able to benefit from a tax incentive. South Africa's electricity crisis is costing the economy as much as R899 million per day, according to central bank estimates. Rolling blackouts of about 6 to 12 hours a day, or so-called stage 3 and stage 6 outages, detract between R204 million and R899 million from the economy daily.

Using diesel generators at grain storage facilities is seven times more expensive than electricity - which impacts food prices, says Wessel Lemmer, general manager of Agbiz Grain, a unit of the Agricultural Business Chamber. Electricity is needed to load grain into storage silos and to unload these again later to be transported to processors like mills. It is also impossible to keep the grain dry and ventilated without electricity. Electricity costs usually make up around 10% of the total storage costs. In September 2022, Astral announced that it was expecting market conditions to deteriorate, with record-high feed input costs, devastating levels of rolling blackouts, and the general decay of municipal infrastructure having a negative impact on operational costs and efficiencies. As rolling blackouts had continued unabated this year, the situation was worsening. Based on prevailing market and operational conditions, the cost to produce poultry exceeded the selling price by at least R2/kg. Feed input costs, which make up about 70% of the cost of producing a live broiler, have increased significantly. At the end of December 2022, the SAFEX yellow maize price peaked at around R5 300/t on the back of a weakening local currency and a tight global balance sheet.
