Agricultural industry organisation AgriSA has called on government to withdraw the draft Mineral Resources Development Amendment Bill and subject it to a full socioeconomic-impact assessment (SEIA), as well as introduce binding landowner consent for mining on zoned agricultural land. The organisation expresses serious concern over the draft Bill, arguing that the Bill's current form poses significant risks to South Africa's agricultural sector, food security and rural sustainability.

Industry organisation the Association of Meat Importers and Exporters (AMIE) has welcomed the government's "Plan A" for long-term trade resilience and competitiveness, which was jointly announced by Trade, Industry and Competition Minister Parks Tau and Agriculture Minister John Steenhuisen. The plan emphasises market diversification and commits to protecting jobs and rural livelihoods, which are critical for South Africa's meat export industry. The industry stated that this is an important opportunity to build long-term growth for the beef export sector and South Africa's broader red meat industry. However, to realise this growth, key operational gaps must be addressed urgently to facilitate access to new and existing export market opportunities.

SA Canegrowers called on food and beverage manufacturers and retailers to commit to buying mainly local sugar in order to support the industry on which one-million livelihoods depends. Trade, Industry and Competition Minister Parks Tau's gazetted a regulation that will allow retailers, food and beverage manufacturers, millers and growers to collectively negotiate on buying mainly local sugar without the talks breaching the Competition Act. The exemptions include diversifying the industry into sectors such as sustainable aviation fuels to enable long-term growth. Higgins Mdluli SA Canegrowers chairperson stated that; "The exemption from competition regulations will allow industry-wide discussions without fear of falling foul of the Competition Act for a period of five years. Such discussions include working towards commitments from local commercial users of sugar and retailers to use and stock mainly locally produced sugar".

South Africa's revised trade offer to the US described as 'broad, generous, open and ambitious' South Africa submitted a revised trade offer to the US, after its previous 'Framework Agreement' submitted in May failed to avert the institution of 30% 'reciprocal tariffs' on South African products as from August 8. Details of the new offer were not provided during a joint briefing hosted by Trade, Industry and Competition Minister and Agriculture Minister. Nevertheless, it was confirmed that it was confined to trade and tariff matters and did not include offers in relation to some of the domestic policy complaints raised by President Donald Trump.
