Weekly Price Watch 04 October 2019

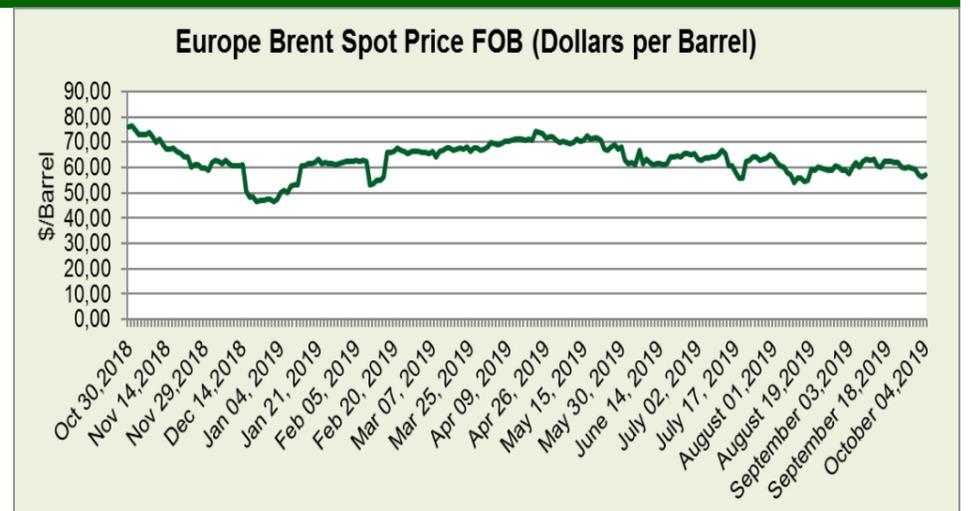

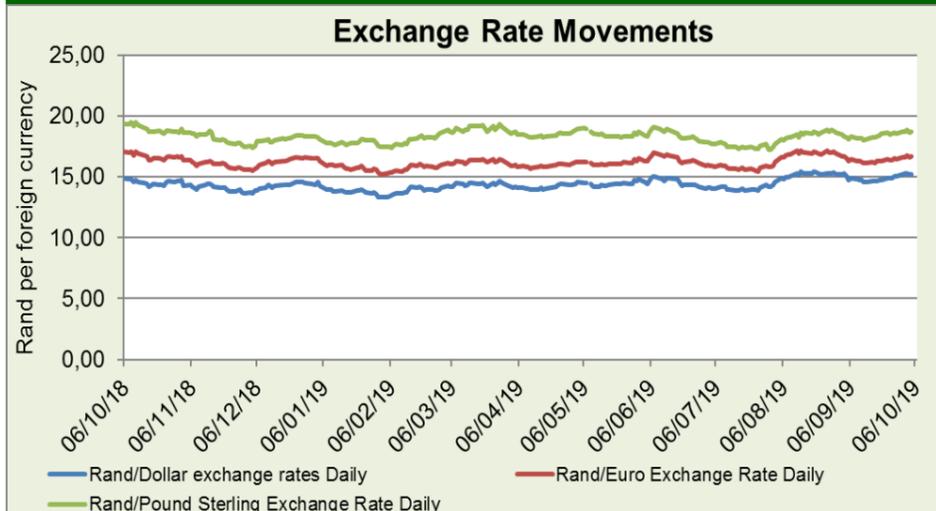

Directorate: Statistics & Economic Analysis

Local and international maize prices increased again this week compared to last week. The price of local maize increased by 0.8% and 1.8% respectively; whilst the US maize price increased by 3.1%. The Crop Committee Estimates Committee (CEC) expects local maize production to be lower than in 2019, whilst internationally; warmer and drier weather outlook in the US and Argentina are expected to affect maize production. Local and international wheat prices increased by 1% and 2.4% respectively. The local price increased due to the weaker rand and volatile international prices. US wheat price increased as traders awaited release of USDA supply and demand reports amidst concerns over shortages of good quality protein spring wheat. Additionally Argentina cut the World wheat outlook. Local and international soybean prices increased by 2.5% and 1.8% respectively as local soybeans production is expected to be lower than in 2018. US soybean prices were higher due to inter-alia; delayed rainfall in soybeans producing regions. Local sunflower prices were higher this week due to strong local demand and lower production outlook in 2019 than in 2018. Sorghum prices remained stable as production is expected to be higher than in 2018 even though the outlook has been revised down by 5%.
