Latest News Developments

The South African Reserve bank plans the biggest overhaul of the nation's cash system in decades, moving to create a cash-management company, roll out white-label ATMs and tighten oversight of how money circulates to make it cheaper and easier to access. The so-called Cash Smart Strategy aims to ensure physical funds remain accessible for low-income and rural communities that have limited digital payment options and often face costs as much as five times higher than wealthier urban users. The reforms are likely to be the largest change in how cash is circulated since ATMs were introduced more than 40 years ago are intended to ease that burden. The central bank expects cash usage to drop by 30% to 40% when the nation reaches digitization levels comparable to India, Brazil and the European Union.

Statistics South Africa data shows that; South Africa's headline consumer inflation slowed to 3.5% year on year in November from 3.6% in October. On a month-on-month terms the Consumer Price Index decreased by 0.1% in November relative to an increase of 0.1% in October. At last month's interest rate meeting the South African Reserve Bank lowered its main lending rate by 25 basis points, citing an improved inflation outlook. The rate cut eased concerns that the new inflation target would prevent the central bank from cutting rates.

According to experts at Ninety-One the nation's top investment firm; Stocks of non-commodity South African companies looks set to rally next year given they trade at a deep discount and trailed the performance of both local bonds and the wider equity gauge in 2025. A credit upgrade by S&P Global Ratings, South Africa's removal from the Financial Action Task Force's dirty-money list and slower inflation amid a 13% gain in the rand to the dollar this year are further evidence of a better trajectory.

The African Development Bank Group (AfDB) and Nedbank Group have announced a landmark financing agreement aimed at improving access to affordable housing in South Africa and expanding trade across Africa. The partnership consists of two components; a R2.5-billion social bond subscription through Nedbank's Sustainable Finance Fundraising Framework and a $60-million trade finance Risk Participation Agreement with Nedbank. The social bond, listed on the JSE, will prioritise funding for affordable housing targeted at women and first-time buyers, as well as green-certified units. The initiative aligns with both institutions' goals of promoting gender equality, climate resilience, and financial inclusion. According to AFD director, the partnership builds on our shared commitment to drive financial access for underserved communities and transform living conditions across South Africa.

Botswana's economy seen shrinking almost 1% in 2025 due to diamond sector woes; Botswana's government now forecasts an economic contraction of almost 1% this year as its key diamond sector continues to struggle, its finance minister said in a budget review. When the main budget was presented in February the country's government had hoped for a 3.3% gross domestic product (GDP) expansion this year, rebounding from last year's 3% contraction.
